ASSET MANAGEMENT IN THE BOARDROOM

Board directors are asset managers. Today's board directors are faced with an increasingly complex operating environment. There is greater scrutiny from shareholders and regulators, and a diminishing ability to predict the future based on past experience. Despite this, the board uses its best collective judgement to continue to make decisions in the best interests of the company.

Topics to be discussed include:

How does the board address asset management decision making? What types of asset management decisions do boards have to make? What questions do boards need to ask to ensure the organisation has effective asset management practices in place? How can asset management practitioners best provide boards with the information required for these critical decisions?

What you will learn from this webinar:

1. Understand the board's perspective on asset management decision making
2. Improve your ability to communicate with senior stakeholders
3. Enhance your skills in decision making

Presented by:
